WHERE EVERYTHING STARTED

Terre e Tradizioni is the result of an adventure that started in 2012 in Raddusa (Enna), City of Wheat. A small local farmer decides to recover some ancient varieties of Sicilian indigenous grains now disappeared from the territory, cultivating them according to the principles of organic farming becoming its curator and guardian. It was the first step.

From the meeting with a master pasta maker, then came the idea of enhancing these ancient grains by creating a line of pasta in which to find the scent and flavor that these ancient cereals, nourished by the earth and the sun of Sicily, enclosed intact for hundreds of years.

OUR SUSTAINABLE PRODUCTION CHAIN

We use only organic grains of varieties known since the Greek-Roman era such as TIMILIA, MAIORCA, RUSSELLO, and SARAGOLLA, cultivated by a small group of farmers, custodians of the local tradition in the rugged and sunny plains of Sicily, Puglia, and Campania.

We grind stone in our mill in Montesano sulla Marcellana (Salerno), inside the National Park of Cilento, Vallo di Diano and Alburni.

We store our semolina in our warehouse at a controlled temperature, to keep its integrity and purity intact.

We preserve all the natural components in the finished products through slow drying at low temperatures.

The commitment to conducting regenerative agriculture that is truly sustainable for the environment is total, in any of our activities.

We cultivate our ancient grains with Organic Farming practices, we use energy from renewable sources for our stone mill and we recover rainwater to irrigate the fields, keeping the soil fertility intact with the composting of processing residues and the practice of green manure. We have also completed the integration of our production chain through the installation of new processing and storage facilities for raw materials, allowing us to present ourselves as a "Farm to Fork" company, from field to table, in every respect.

OUR ITALIAN ORGANIC ANCIENT GRAINS

TIMILIA® is a variety of endangered durum wheat, typical of central Sicily and represents the its biodiversity.

Fruit of millenia of natural selection, its value has been forgotten over the years, and now rediscovered by virtue of its particular organoleptic and nutritional qualities. It is characterized by a darker ear compared to modern grains and a low yield production offset by a high presence of micronutrients and antioxidant polyphenols.

Durum wheat RUSSELLO® it was widely spread in the South-eastern Sicily since the beginning of last century. It proves the wealth of the Sicilian cereal landscape.

Characterized by a low Glutine Index and source of fiber, it takes its name from the ear's red color, which has a tall posture and a reduced production compared to modern grains. A "hard-dough" bread is produced with this pasta, "bread of the Iblei", typical of the provinces of Ragusa and Syracuse.

SARAGOLLA is an ancient variety of durum wheat originating from Central and Southern Italy. It comes from wild spelt, the first cereal used by man and for its high content protein, it is particularly suitable for preparation of pasta, bread and pizza.

Rich in minerals and with a low Glutine Index, it turns out particularly suitable for those with difficulties in the assimilation of the very tenacious gluten found in modern grains, other than celiac disease.

MAIORCA is a variety of soft wheat rediscovered in recent years, cultivated traditionally in the central areas of Sicily.

It is a thin and harsh plant, which matures quickly, from arid soils it snatches one very soft white flour that works the best in preparation of desserts or special breads and is excellent in a mixture for Pizza.

In the ancient recipes of our grandmother's time, the name Maiorca was the definition of excellence in soft wheat flour.

OUR MEDITERRANEAN SUPERFOODS

Our organic ancient grains, with low yield but of the highest quality profile, are the result of millennial natural selections and are distinguished from modern grains for a unique taste and aroma but also and above all for the exceptional nutritional contents.

They are rich in enzymatic activating minerals (iron, zinc, manganese), proteins, fibers and antioxidants (polyphenols). They also have a low Glutine Index (a measure of the structural strength of gluten) which makes them highly digestible and therefore suitable for consumption for those who have difficulty in assimilating the very tenacious gluten of modern, different grains from celiac disease.
